2. Getting to Zaragoza by Plane

Zaragoza's airport is quite small and there are only a few flights each week. But, if you fly from London-Stansted, Brussels-Charleroi, Milan-Bérgamo, Munich, Venice, Cluj-Napoca, or Bucarest you are lucky because there is a direct flight available. There are also national flights from Palma de Mallorca, Malaga, and Santa Cruz de Tenerife.

If you live anywhere else or the flights that exist do not fit your schedule, we strongly recommend you to fly to Barcelona or Madrid and then get the bus or the train from there to Zaragoza. Madrid has only one airport (Barajas) and so does Barcelona with El Prat de Llobregat.

If you fly to Madrid or Barcelona, here are a few tips on how to get from the airports to the respective train stations:

Madrid

There is a "cercanías" train line, the C1 that departs from Terminal T4 every 30 minutes and connects the airport with one of the 2 train stations (Puerta de Atocha).

- Duration: short train ride = 25 min.

- Cost: A C1 ticket costs 2,6€, but it is free if you are traveling on the high-speed train (called 'AVE' ("Alta Velocidad española")) to Zaragoza.

Barcelona

There is a train line, R2 that departs from Terminal T2 every 30 minutes that connects the airport with the train station.

- Duration: 19 min. Then, at the train station, you can find the high-speed train to Zaragoza.

- Cost: around 50 euros, although it is cheaper the earlier you buy the ticket!

3. Getting to Zaragoza by Train

Zaragoza has got one train station called “Zaragoza-Delicias”. If you live in Marseille, you are lucky, because you have a direct connection to Zaragoza by train (6 hours and 22 minutes, 80€). If you live in Paris, you can get a train to Barcelona and from there one to Zaragoza (10 hours, 100€). Also, if you live in Lisbon, you can travel to Madrid by train, and from there to Zaragoza (12 hours, 70€ (only available overnight)).

Zaragoza has very good railroad connections with Barcelona, Madrid, Seville, Cordoba, Malaga, and Girona. You can buy any train tickets here.

Train Journeys from Madrid

- Cost: between 30-50€ (it depends on the time of the day you are traveling) and it is cheaper the sooner you buy it.

- Duration: 1 hour and 15 minutes. It is the fastest way to travel from Madrid to Zaragoza.

These high-speed trains normally offer wifi service, free headphones, and a movie is always displayed. It is also the best way to admire the landscape and to work with your laptop. You can buy your tickets here.

Train journeys from Barcelona

- Cost: between 30-50€ (it depends on the time of the day you are traveling) and it is cheaper the sooner you buy it.

- Duration: 1 hour and 40 minutes. It is the fastest way to travel from Barcelona to Zaragoza.

You can buy your tickets here.

4. Getting to Zaragoza by bus

Zaragoza’s train station is also a bus station. There are bus lines available from all over Europe. Further information is found here. Unfortunately, the website is only available in Spanish. Therefore if you wish to come by bus, tell us where you’re from and we will contact you and explain to you what your possible options are.

Bus rides from Madrid airport to Zaragoza:

There is a direct bus connection from Madrid’s Barajas airport to Zaragoza. The bus departs from Terminal T4.

- Cost: 17€

- Duration: 3 hours 30 minutes - 4 hours long.

You can buy your tickets here.

Bus rides from Barcelona airport to Zaragoza:

Unfortunately, there is no direct connection to Zaragoza on a bus from Barcelona’s airport. However, you need to go to the bus station “Barcelona-Nord” (how to do it is explained here). Then you need to get the bus to Zaragoza.

- Cost: 15€

- Duration: 3 hours 30 minutes - 4 hours long.

You can buy your tickets here.

5. Getting to Zaragoza by Car

Zaragoza is very well connected to Madrid and Valencia via a Highway. It's also well connected to Bilbao and Barcelona via a Tollway. There is a direct connection to France in the north, but it is only a 'national road', not a highway. The same thing happens with the connection to Castellón.

Summing up if you come from France, you should come from the East and travel to Barcelona and from there to Zaragoza. Traveling from Zaragoza to Barcelona usually takes 3 hours and 15 min. Traveling from Zaragoza to the French border takes about 5 hours. Speed limitations in Spain are 120 km/h in highways, 90-100 km/h in 'national' roads, 50 km/h in cities and normally 30 km/h in one-way-roads.

6. How to get to the Hostel

The Hostel is Hotel Rio Arga, located in Calle Contamina, 20, 50003 Zaragoza.

From the Airport

TAXI/ CAR

- Duration: 22-minute taxi ride away
- Cost: Around 15 euros (but prices may vary)

PUBLIC TRANSPORT

Walk 10 minutes to bus stop number 769 and getting bus line 604 with direction to Zaragoza. After 10 stops (a 14 minute ride) until bus stop (330) - Av. Navarra, 3. A 1-minute walk from there is bus stop Ps. María Agustín 37. You can get bus line 22 with direction to Las Fuentes, 3 stops until Coso 54. A 6 minute walk away from the bus stop is the Hotel.

- Duration: 45 minutes in total.
- Cost: 1'35€ per bus ticket (which you can buy on the bus).

From the Train Station

TAXI/ CAR

- Duration: 17 minutes long
- Cost: A taxi from the Zaragoza-Delicias Train Station would cost around 8 euros (but depending on the traffic this may change).

PUBLIC TRANSPORT

There's bus line 34 with direction to "Cementerio" which passes every 8 minutes by the train station.

- Duration: 28 minutes to get to the Hostel.
- Cost: Each bus ticket costs 1,35 Euros.
